THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE INFANT

Mary Jo Rattermann

New Course

The rate of a child's development during the first 24 months of life is astounding. During this time infants begin to interact with their environment in increasingly more sophisticated ways; they begin to walk, to talk, and they affect the people around them. In this course we will examine the intellectual development of the child during these crucial months, as well as the infant's emotional and social growth. In addition to providing an overview of the course of infant development, this class will also introduce the student to the basic research questions and techniques used to study infant development.

Students will be expected to read and critique a series of articles from the professional scientific literature. Students will also be asked to give one presentation during the course of the semester. Additionally, they will write a final paper which may be developed into a Division I examination project. Class will meet twice a week for one and a half hours. Enrollment is limited to 30.

CCS 162

THE QUESTION OF HUMAN RATIONALITY

Neil Stillings New Course

A central topic in contemporary cognitive science is the study of our rational capacities, which has been a prominent theme in Western philosophy for over two thousand years. Recent scientific research on rationality has led to some startling and seemingly paradoxical results. On the one hand people's thought often fails to conform to ideal models of rational information processing that have been developed by logicians, decision theorists, and philosophers of science. On the other hand people possess a commonsense ability to respond adaptively to their surroundings that has stumped researchers attempting to design intelligent robots and computer systems. This course is an introduction to the wealth of results on human rationality and irrationality that has emerged in recent cognitive science and to the mysteries those results have revealed. Class will meet twice a week for one and a half hours. Enrollment & limited to 20.

CCS 174

COMING OUT: ISSUES IN GAY AND LESBIAN FILM AND VIDEO Stashu Kybartas

Course Changed

This survey course will look at the way gays and lesbians have been looked at and how they have looked at themselves in the past. Works viewed will range from some of the earliest images of gays and lesbians to important breakthrough works to recent "alternative" works by independent and "avant-garde" artists. These screenings are designed to act as a forum to facilitate discussion of critical issues which have faced and are facing the gay and lesbian community: Is there a gay aesthetic? Should gays and lesbians try to assimilate or assert a "queer" identity? How is gay and lesbian sexuality represented in film and videos? How are current representations (especially on TV) helping or hurting the community? These questions will be addressed in light of race and class differences in the gay community.

Classes will consist of lectures, screenings, and critical discussions of issues raised in the work. Several short papers and a final paper will be required along with critical reading assignments. Class will meet twice a week for one and a half hours. Enrollment is limited to 25.

One film/video/media theory or history course is a prerequisite.

CCS 247

PRODUCING CABLE AND COMMUNITY TELEVISION

Stashu Kybartas Course Changed

This course is for students interested in producing cable or community television shows. The class will learn to produce live television shows by learning to work effectively in the TV studio, doing research, and working together on TV crews. Students will generate ideas for specific shows, research the ideas, and cast the shows when necessary. When the class is ready we will broadcast live on INTRAN.

Examples of community and cable TV shows will be viewed and discussed critically to contextualize the work produced in this class within the larger cable TV community. Shows from Paper Tiger TV, Deep Dish, Out on Tuesdays (Channel 4 in England), as well as other alternative television will be screened. Students completing this course will have a grasp of the issues facing independent producers working in cable and community television. Class will meet once a week for four hours. Enrollment is limited to 18.

CCS 248

U.S. JOURNALISM AND THE DEBATE OVER IMPERIALISM David Kerr

New Course

"The ripe apple falls into our hands, and we would be very foolish if we should throw it away."--from an editorial in the New York Independent, February 4, 1893, advocating the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands.

From the early 1890s until World War I, the terms and substance of the debate over U.S. imperialism were strongly influenced by the American press. The nature and degree of this influence is complex and has been obscured by a focus on near-mythic press lords such as Hearst and Pulitzer. In this course we will attempt to look beneath the myths to determine how U.S. journalism interpreted its responsibility to inform the U.S. public about the prospect of building an empire beyond our shores.

Two brief critical essays and one long research paper will be required. Class will meet twice a week for one and a half hours. Enrollment is limited to 30.

CCS 255 LAB PRACTICUM IN DEVELOPMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY

Mary Jo Rattermann

New Course

Students will be given the opportunity to participate in ongoing research of children's cognitive development. Projects will involve pre-school children's ability to acquire and use new knowledge, their ability to solve problems, and the effects of language acquisition on these skills. Students will be expected to attend weekly lab meetings and also to spend 5-6 hours a week designing stimuli, testing children, and performing data analysis. Class will meet once a week for two hours. Enrollment is limited to 10 by instructor permission.

School of Humanities and Arts

NOTE: The Film/Photography faculty would like students to engage in ONE critical issues class (film, photography art history) prior to taking Film/Video I or Still Photography Workshop I. Enrollment method for introductory film and photography courses will be by means of a modified lottery system. Students will be asked to fill out an information sheet at the first class. They will list their academic level, previous history of H&A classes, future academic plans, and reason for wanting to take the course. There will be space provided for indicating the number of times a student has tried to take the course and whether or not the student is a transfer. The forms will be sorted into categories and a lottery will take place for each group. Of course, the number of spaces allotted for each group will be small, but we hope that this system will address some of the concerns raised about an undifferentiated lottery and als help to establish an accurate accounting of the demand for these courses. The list of students enrolled in the class will be posted in the Humanities and Arts office the morning following the first class.

AMERICAN LANDSCAPES: BIG WOODS, BIG DESERT

David Smith New Course

In this course, we will examine the image in literature, painting, and photography of the American wilderness and those who inhabited it, experienced it, or destroyed it. We will learn enough about the background of cultural and environmental history to gain perspective on the image. Writers for the 'big woods' segment of the course will include Hawthorne, William Byrd, Cooper, John Muir, Faulkner, Margaret Atwood, John McPhee. For the "desert" we'll read Mary Austin, Edward Abbey, Georgia O'Keefe, Barry Lopez, and Leslie Marmon Silko. Required will be short papers, one long project.

This course is designed to be a seminar for first year students and will have special emphasis put on skills necessary for succeeding at Hampshire. Class will meet twice each week for one and one-half hours.

HA 126 LATIN AMERICAN FICTION

Norman Holland
New Course

The paradigm of the labyrinth may, retrospectively, dominate our thinking of twentieth-century narrative. In no world literature are images of labyrinths—be them Ulyssean or Thesean variants—as persistent and pervasive as they have been in Latin American literature, not just recently but since the 1920's. This course will explore a select number of Latin American works which embody this paradigm in their structure or view of the world or both. The course will meet twice each week for one and one-half hours.

HA 127

AMERICAN VOICES, AMERICAN LIVES

Michael Lesy New Course

Biography and autobiography are primary forms of literary non-fiction. To read and write them is to understand the world hidden in the self and the self entangled in the world. The study of such narratives provides and provokes a knowledge of history and psychology, sociology and literature. Writing such narratives requires a mastery of prose that is both evocative and analytic.

These are the works that will be read: a biography (Reagan's America/Innocents at Home by Garry Wills), two oral histories (Hard Times by Studs Terkel and All God's Dangers/The Life of Nate Shaw, as told by Theodore Rosengarten), and one autobiography (Time Bends by Arthur Miller).

Students will be asked to write short profile/biographies of friends, relatives, intimates, and strangers. They will then be asked to extend one of these profiles into a longer, more insightful and analytic biography/life story. Weekly writing exercises and well-read class participation will be required. Class will meet twice weekly for one and one-half hours. Enrollment will be limited to 15 by permission of the instructor.

HA 131

BEGINNING PLAYWRIGHTING

Ellen Donkin New Course

This course is aimed at beginning students of playwrighting. It will focus on how a script becomes theatrically viable. We will have discussion and in-class writing exercises as well as readings from student work and from published plays. Some of the areas that will receive special attention will include inventing and developing dramatically distinctive characters, the shaping of scene beginnings and endings, what is meant by dramatic structure and dramatic action, and ways to think about the unfolding of plot. Students will be encouraged to think visually as they work. Our work will also include learning how to comment on one another's work, both on an intuitive level and in the very specific categories and terms of class discussion. Students will be urged to submit to the annual spring New Play Festival. Class will meet twice each week for two hours each time. Enrollment is limited to 15.

HA 140 ADVENTURES ACROSS THE SEAS

Jeffrey Wallen
New Course

In this class, we will read works which either focus on the adventure and mystery of sailing the high seas (such as Edgar Allan Poe's The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym) or on what happens once one arrives somewhere else (Rudyard Kipling's Kim), or on both (Joseph Conrad's Heart of Darkness). We will explore the fascination of the seagoing journey for the nineteenth-century imagination, examine the social alternatives offered by the ship and the journey, and question the relation of adventure to empire. We will read other works by Poe, Kipling, and Conrad, as well as works by Melville and Robert Louis Stevenson. Class will meet twice each week for one and one-half hours. Enrollment is limited to 25.

HA 229 FORMS OF AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Jeffrey Wallen
New Course

Autobiography is not one literary genre among others--autobiographical writing cuts across distinctions of genre, and engages some basic assumptions of literary categorization, such as the opposition between fact and fiction. In addition to investigating the problems and consequences of self-portrayal, (e.g. why does an author resort to autobiography, and how does the creation of the figure of a "self" function in these works?) We will examine the ways in which autobiographical writing probes and reformulates our conceptions of literature. Readings may include Rousseau's Confessions, DeQuincey's Confessions of an Opium Eater, Heines The Harz lourney and Ideas-Book Le Grand, Proust's Swan's Way, Stein's Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas, Genet's The Thief's lournal, Leris Manhood, Hurston's Dust Tracks on the Road. Enrollment is open. Class will meet twice a week for one and one-half hours.

CAMUS

Robert Meagher New Course

Several years after his death, Susan Sontag wrote of Camus "Kafka arouses pity and terror, Joyce admiration, Proust and Gide respect, but no writer that I can think of, except Camus, has aroused love."

This course will address itself to this man and to his work, which offer not only a pitiless indictment of the evil genius of our times, but also a vision of rare compassion and integrity. We will consider the full range of Camus' published writings: fictional, philosophical, and dramatic.

The focus will be upon the philosophy and art of Camus, drawing upon biographical and historical material so as to inform and to sharpen our understanding. Particular attention will be given to the Helenic foundations of Camus' vision. Enrollment is open. Class will meet once each week for three hours.

HA 250

INTRODUCTORY POETRY WRITING

Paul Jenkins New Course

Intended for Division II-level students who have begun writing poetry on their own or have some familiarity with contemporary poetry, this course will be conducted as a workshop in which students' own writing will be the subject of discussion. Over the course's first half students will do assigned writing and reading designed to sharpen alertness to language, sound and line, and imagery. Over the last half of the semester students will be free to bring on a regular basis new work of their own choosing, with emphasis on the revision process. At the course's end workshop participants will be expected to submit a group of poems in a state of near-completion for comment and evaluation. Enrollment is limited to 15 participants. HA 255

TOPICS IN AMERICAN STUDIES

David Smith Description Changed

A concentrator's seminar balancing student work with examination of new or seminal texts in the field of American literature and culture. A seminar environment open primarily to concentrators in American Studies who have already filed or are in well-developed stages of Division II or Division III. Enrollment limited to 16.

HA 260

INTERMEDIATE PAINTING

This course is a continuation of the fall term's Introduction to painting and is only open to those students currently enrolled in that course.

HA 279

FOUNDATIONS IN CULTURAL STUDIES: REPRESENTATIONS OF LATIN AMERICA Description Changed

Centering on Hollywood's Good Neighbor Policy movies, the course will focus on three images dear to Latin American societies: bananas, peasants and informants. The class will explore the representation and contestation of these images in movies, in literature and in theoretical writings. We will see, Flying Down to Rio, Copacabana, Down Argentina Way, How Tasty Was My Frenchman, Gilda, and Three Caballeros; read The Lost Steps, Betrayed by Rita Hayworth, and "The Smallest Woman in the World"; and discuss passages from One Hundred Years of Solitude, and Tristes Tropiques. Enrollment is open.

HA 285

LABAN MOVEMENT ANALYSIS I

Ed Groff

Description Changed

Laban Movement Analysis provides a systematic approach to the description and interpretation of human movement. It recognizes movement as a language of communication and provides a conceptual framework for identifying the ingredients of movement expression. Through study and physical exploration of the basic effort, shape, body and space concepts, students will examine their own movement patterns and preferences (with the potential for expanding personal repertoire), and develop skill in observation and analysis of the movement of others. The course is open to students from varied disciplines and there will be opportunity for exploration and application of LMA concepts and principles to individual areas of interest such as: chorec graphy, performance, movement education, movement therapy, and non-verbal communication. THE DESIGN RESPONSE II

Wayne Kramer Description Added

In this course, we will explore the techniques of design choices; choices in approach, style and execution. We will try to address the process of designer response through a series of practical, collaborative exercises and hopefully gain some insight into such questions as:

- 1. How can a designer validate his or her response?
- 2. What criteria should a designer establish during first readings? 3. How is style determined?
- 4. How is artistic consensus achieved?
- 5. How are style and approach expressed?
- 6. What is the importance of medium and technique in presentation/portfolio work?

This course will meet three times each week for one hour each session. Some prior design experience is required

HA/SS 296 MAKING SPACE: ENVIRONMENTAL DESIGN AND SOCIAL CHANGE

Myrna Breitbart New Course

How have built environments been structured to reflect, inhibit, or promote prescribed social relationships? How would a landscape based upon egalitarian principles differ from one based upon inegalitarian principles? How do struggles over control of public space contribute to awareness of gender, race, or class inequality and fundamentally change those involved? What is the relationship between social change and the transformation in use or design of physical space?

Attempts have been made in real life and fiction to partly effect social change and create a "better world" through architecture and the planned design of alternative living and working environments. We will examine the effectiveness of these efforts, focusing on the intended and unintended consequences. Examples may include utopian socialist, Garden City and other planning/architectural movements; historical and contemporary feminist design alternatives; and current debates over appropriate uses/design of public space. Enrollment is limited to 25.

SHAKESPEARE L. Brown Kennedy New Course

In this lecture-discussion course we will read 8-10 plays (histories, comedies, tragedies, romances) with attention to the texts, and to their social and intellectual contexts. Particular attention will be given to issues of power, gender, and theatricality--the "position" of Prospero, Miranda, and Caliban. Plays of other Elizabethan and Jacobean writers may be used in conjunction with Shakespeare's texts.

This is an advanced 200 level course, first year students by permission only. An extra seminar will be provide if there are enough people who want to take this course as a 300 level advanced seminar. The course will meet twice each week for one and one-half hours.

HA 314

SENSE AND SPIRIT Robert Meagher

New Course

In this course, we will examine and explore the shared sources, borders, metaphors, and experience of art, philosophy, and theology so as to come to a more integral idea of the complex unity of sense and spirit. Enrollment is limited to 15 students. The course will meet once each weeklfor three hours.

AGROECOLOGY I - NATIVE AMERICAN FOOD SYSTEMS

Lawrence Winship Brian Schultz Description Changed

When Europeans landed in the 'New World' they encountered food systems unlike any they had seen at home, made up of completely unknown animal and plant species. Following contact an intense era of biotic exchange began and the food systems in Europe and her colonies were radically transformed. To broaden the discussion during the 'Columbus Year' we will focus our study on the agricultural ecology of North, Central and South American cultures, pre- and post-contact. We will draw on diverse historical and scientific sources, including reprints of original diaries and journals, collections of essays and standard agriculture and horticulture books and research articles. We will focus on skills useful in analyzing and designing all agroecosystems, including computer and lab analysis. We will introduce and explore topics such as crop origins, polycultures, non-chemical pest control, cover crops and soil fertility, and waste management by composting.

This course is part of a two-course sequence (second half in Fall 1992). Upon successful completion of both courses, students will have earned a PASS for their NS Div. I Exam. Each half of the course may also be taken separately. Projects begun here may also be completed as Division I Examination.

We will meet twice a week for seminar and one afternoon each week to visit farms, learn lab and computer methods and to design the field experiment we will plant in late April and early May. Requirements for the class include active class participation, steady attendance, two short papers, a few short 'lab writeups' and a longer analytical research-style paper detailing a particular experiment for the summer project.

NS 148

HUMAN GENE THERAPY: PROCEED WITH CAUTION

Lynn Miller New Course

In the past 20 years an explosion of techniques in molecular biology has lead to the promise of curing human genetic disease by gene transplantation. In this seminar we will examine the promise and the risks in this technology; first by reading Holtzman's Proceed with Caution and second by learning to read the original literature in this field.

This seminar should be useful and, I hope, provocative to all students thinking about careers in health related fields. All students are expected to write 3 essays from the original literature and to lead one seminar. Students are encouraged to launch Natural Science Division I Exams in this seminar. Class will meet three time a week for one and one-half hours.

NEW GUINEA TAPEWORMS & JEWISH GRANDMOTHERS: NATURAL HISTORY OF INFECTIOUS DISEASE Lynn Miller

Course Added

Did you ever wonder why Jewish grandmothers who make gefilte fish from Norwegian sturgeon so frequently are parasitized by tapeworms? Maybe not, but who gets parasitized, when, and by what is highly significant to understanding the history of humankind. In this seminar we will read and think about the failure of modern (Western) medicine to eliminate most of the tropical diseases of Homo sapiens. Each student must prepare one seminar and write an essay on the social and medical aspects of these diseases (malaria, schistosomiasis, giardiasis, trypanosomiasis, kala-azar, etc.) focusing on the disease in one particular tropical or subtropical country. We will read Desowitz's book (given as course title) and articles from the primary medical literature. Class will meet for one and one-half hours twice a week.

NS 208

PLANT PHYSIOLOGY Lawrence Winship Description Changed

Essentially a survey of modern physiological and molecular plant biology, this course will emphasize lab skills and methodology. Current advances in our understanding of plant growth, development, adaptation and reproduction have been very much driven by innovations in instrumentation and analysis. We will use a very up-to-date text (Plant Physiology, 4th ed., Salisbury and Ross, 1992) as our basic resource, with other readings in journal articles and reviews.

We will begin with a quick exploration of plant structure and anatomy, then rapidly move into the lab. We will work in small research teams and each team will complete a mini-experiment using each of five set-ups. Topics for projects will most likely be photosynthesis, symbiotic nitrogen fixation, plant morphogenesis and hormonal control, inorganic nitrogen nutrition, plant energy and water balance. We will use computers extensively for data analysis and (sometimes) data acquisition.

While this course does not formally require a prior chemistry, math or physics class, the language of modern plant science is drawn from chemistry and physics. Previous experience or skills is highly desirable. Requirements for the course include 5 detailed lab write-ups and weekly problem sets. We will meet twice per week for seminar and discussion of experiments and once for afternoon lab.

NS 227

HUMAN POPULATION GENETICS Lynn Miller

Description Changed

Three different theories for modern human origins are found in the literature: a) we originated in Africa; b) we originated in Asia (China, maybe); c) we originated in three separate groups, survivors of an earlier expansion of Homo. We will examine the kinds of genetic evidence used to establish these hypotheses.

We will read and discuss Li and Graur's Fundamentals of Molecular Evolution and many papers from the original literature on human origins. Everyone is expected to lead seminars on their own readings of the original literature. This seminar is not the place to work on an Natural Science Division I Exam (See NS 148). Class will meet for one and one-half hours three times a week.

BOOK SEMINAR IN PHYSICS

Herbert Bernstein New Course

This seminar is intended for students concentrating in physics and the physical sciences and for those in other areas who wish to do advanced work in physics. The class will read, discuss, and solve problems from or related to an upper level undergraduate physics text in one of the two following subjects: (1) qualitative physics: estimates, orders-of-magnitude, and "back-of-the-envelope" calculations for improved comprehension of a wide variety of phenomena, from the heights of the mountains to the shapes of molecules; (2) reconstructive classical mechanics: an intermediate mechanics class which also studies the history, values and circumstances built into classical physics.

Option one will use the manuscript text "Search for Simplicity" currently being co-authored by the instructor. Option two will use an intermediate (3rd year) college text on mechanics, which we will chose together, as well as some of the instructor's essays on reconstructive knowledge, the work of Bon's Hessen and other commentators on the use of classical mechanics in the time of the Industrial Revolution. The choice between options will be made by the students themselves. Students who have not taken one year of Basic Physics or the equivalent should not take this course. Class will met twice a week for two hours or so. Admission by interview

NS/SS 286

A COUNTRY MADE BY WAR

Allan Krass New Course

Geoffrey Perret's A Country Made By War ends with the observation, "At a thousand unnoticed points America's military past impinges on [its] daily life." From the patriots at Concord Bridge to the Patriots in Saudi Arabia, from General Washington to General Schwartzkopf, from Eli Whitney to United Technologies, war has been an integral part of our development as a nation and society. The seminar will examine America's military history in an attempt to analyze the uniquely American way of war and the way it has helped to create the American way of life. The interaction involves our culture, politics, economics and technology, and the course will include at least some of each. The seminar will be useful to students doing Division II work in American history, national security policy, or foreign policy as well as peace studies or history of technology. The seminar will meet two times per week for one and a half hours.

THE USE AND ABUSE OF BIOLOGY

Alan Goodman New Course

The purpose of this course is to provide advanced Division II and Division III students with a vehicle for exploring how science and politics interact. We will explore issues around the development of a scientific: "agenda" and funding of that agenda, the development of paradigms and research questions, and how scientific information is translated for popular consumption. While specific topics covered will largely depend on students interests, the politics of the human genome project, paradigms in the study of human variation, decision making and politics in health and nutrition (AIDS, undernutrition, etc.) campaigns are a few topics that will certainly be addressed. This seminar will meet once a week for three hours.

MARINE ECOLOGY SEMINAR Charlene D'Avanzo

Description Changed

In this seminar we will focus on several classical papers in marine ecology and marine environmental science. The first set of topics with papers selected by the instructor, will include ecological-biological issues such as: deep sea and coral reef ecology and coastal water pollution. The second set of papers will be selected by the students in the class. The format of this course is discussion-seminar; each week one or two students will be responsible for directing the seminar from carefully selected papers that we all read. In addition, each student will write a critical analysis of each of the two topics they present. Class will meet for three hours once a week.

SS 148

URBAN SOCIAL ECOLOGY Myrna Breitbart Description Changed

This course examines the origins, demise and recent revival of urban ecology as a field. Contrasting historical perspectives are assessed with special attention paid to the practical planning applications of anarchist and feminist notions of human ecology and decentralism to cities in the late nineteenth century, and revealing debates between female urban reformers and men of the Chicago School of Sociology that set the tone for urban ecology in the twentieth century.

The course also examines the changing quality of life in contemporary cities as it differentially affects residents, and expands the concept of the "ecological city" as it is presently understood in the current EcoCity movement.

Finally, current urban activism around such issues as housing, environmental racism etc. are employed to set forth research and activist agendas for the 1990s. The class will meet twice a week for one and a half hours. Enrollment is limited to 25.

IRON, GLASS AND POWER: THE POLITICAL CULTURE OF THE INDUSTRIAL CITY

Myrna Breitbart Joan Landes Cancelled SS 234 SOCIOLOGY OF ISLAM

Ali Mirsepassi New Course

Critical survey of sociological theories of religion and their relevance to understanding of Islam as a social construct. Classical (Comte, Durkheim, Marx, Weber) and contemporary (Frankfort School, Parsons, Berger, Geertz, Luhmann, Habermas) sociological theories will be considered. The relationship between Islam and capitalism, the link between modern class formation and secular ideologies, and the evolution of civil society in the Middle East will be examined.

SS 240

GENDER AND THE PUBLIC SPHERE

Joan Landes New Course

This course will reexamine Jurgen Habermas's account of the origins and structural transformation of the modern public sphere from the perspective of feminist theory. Our focus will be on the interplay between gender, citizenship and democracy from the eighteenth-century to the present in Europe (particularly France) and North America. Topics to be investigated include: Barriers to women's political representation; the cultural symbolism of femininity in public life, the relationship of gender and reason in the Western philosophical tradition, feminist couterpublics and the liberal public sphere, the body politic, public opinion, public and private spaces, mediatized publics, and electronic democracy. This seminar will meet once a week for two and a half hours. Enrollment is open.

NATIONALISM IN THE MIDDLE EAST

Ahmet Kuyas New Course

Starting from the late 19th century, the course will examine the rise of nationalist ideologies in the Middle East, including the Turkic speaking peoples of the Russian Empire. Special attention will be paid to the relationship between socio-political development and the rise of nationalism, to the problems created by the advent of the new ideology, and to its role in the still-persistent conflict between secularism and fundamentalism.

SS 253

BUDDHISM AND SOCIETY IN SOUTH AND SOUTHEAST ASIA

Susan Darlington
New Course

This course will explore the social aspects of Buddhism as it is manifested in South and Southeast Asian cultures. We will look at the teachings of the Buddha in cultural perspective, the history of Buddhism, and how it has been adapted to different cultural, social, and religious settings in the region. The cultures of South and Southeast Asia will be studied as necessary to understand the form Buddhism takes in different areas. Since this course will focus on the social aspects of the religion, its philosophy and doctrine will be discussed as they relate to everyday practice. Buddhism's role as both a conservative force maintaining the status quo and a force for social change and justice will also be discussed. The class will meet twice a week for one and a half hours. Enrollment is limited to 25.

EUROP AND ITS OTHERS

Leonard Glick
Joan Landes
Description Changed

European colonialism was supported by and reflected in cultural imagery: philosophical speculations about their role in history, fictional portraits, pictures of colonized people, ethnological commentary, travel literature, and so on. In this course we study how Europeans have perceived, portrayed and continue to describe the peoples of the Americas and the Pacific. We will focus on the conquest and discovery of previously unknown worlds, beginning with the Spanish conquest of the New World, the colonization of North America, and the conquest of the Maoris and other Pacific peoples. We will draw on materials from history, literature, anthropology, philosophy, art history, cinema, and cultural theory. An essential argument of the course is that "discourses" and "representations" have promoted and sustained European political and cultural domination.

SS 267

SEXUALITY AND REPRESENTATION IN U.S. HISTORY

E. Frances White New Course

The concept of representation has complex and contradictory meanings. This course will look at the tensions between the way that the dominant culture, on the one hand, and African-American male and female intellectuals, on the other hand, have represented black sexuality in four historical periods - during slavery, Reconstruction, the "Harlem" Renaissance, and the civil rights movement. The course will examine both history and theory as it illuminates the complex ways that structures of dominance, such as race and sexuality, transform the meaning of each other and raise contradictions in our society.

A COUNTRY MADE BY WAR Allan Krass

New Course

Geoffrey Perret's A Country Made By War ends with the observation, "At a thousand unnoticed points America's military past impinges on [its] daily life." From the patriots at Concord Bridge to the Patriots in Saudi Arabia, from General Washington to General Schwartzkopf, from Eli Whitney to United Technologies, was has been an integral part of our development as a nation and society. The seminar will examine America's military history in an attempt to analyze the uniquely American way of war and the way it has helped to create the American way of life. The interaction involves our culture, politics, economics and technology, and the course will include at least some of each. The seminar will be useful to students doing Division II work in American history, national security policy, or foreign policy as well as peace studies or history of technology. The seminar will meet two times per week for one and a half hours. Enrollment is limited to 20.

MAKING SPACE: ENVIRONMENTAL DESIGN AND SOCIAL CHANGE

Myrna Breitbart New Course

How have built environments been structured to reflect, inhibit, or promote prescribed social relationships? How would a landscape based upon egalitarian principles differ from one based upon inegalitarian principles? How do struggles over control of public space contribute to awareness of gender, race, or class inequality and fundamentally change those involved? What is the relationship between social change and the transformation in use or design of physical space?

Attempts have been made in real life and fiction to partly effect social change and create a "better world" through architecture and the planned design of alternative living and working environments. We will examine the effectiveness of these efforts, focusing on the intended and unintended consequences. Examples may include utopian socialist, Garden City and other planning/architectural movements; historical and contemporary feminist design alternatives; and current debates over appropriate uses/design of public space. Class will meet once a week for two and a half hours. Enrollment is limited to 25.

PROBLEMS OF INTERNATIONAL PEACE AND SECURITY

International

ual Michael Klare

Relations 311s

A research-oriented seminar on critical problems of international peace and security in the 1990s, intended for students who seek to enhance both their research skills and their understanding of current world security affairs. We will focus on problems of regional conflict in the Third World, and on problems arising from the flow of advanced military technologies (nuclear, chemical, and conventional) from the industrial powers of the "North" to the emerging regional powers of the developing world. We will also consider both traditional and innovative approaches to the amelioration of these problems. The course will begin with presentations on these themes by the instructor, along with a discussion of research principles and methods. Each student will select a particular problem for intensive study, to result in a research paper and oral report on this topic. This course is particularly suited for upper-division students who intend to pursue graduate education in this field or who seek to obtain positions or internships with governmental and non-governmental agencies in the field.

Introduction to dance as a universal behavior of human culture. Through a survey of world dance traditions and an emphasis on dance as celebration, as well as dance as performance, the varied significance of dance is outlined. The course uses readings, video and film analysis and dancing to familiarize students with functional aspects of dance and organizing areas of culture. Through intensive viewing and discussion, and participation in diverse traditional dance, students will have a foundation for the study of dance in society and an overview of the literature of both non-Euro-American and Euro-American dance. Both the artistic and anthropological perspectives will be considered. For dance majors, this course provides an opportunity for comparison with the history of dance in "western" societies; for non-majors, the course provides an alternative approach to multiculturalism, the consideration of diverse cultures through dance. Prerequisite for Dance 375.
